Brass Porthole Mirrors

Elegant mirrors set into highly polished cast brass porthole frames. The screw fittings are operational enabling them to be used as interesting hatches for cupboards, walls or doors.

4937 Brass Porthole Mirror, 30cm.
4935 Brass Porthole Mirror, 15cm.

4937 4935

The Original Paratrooper's 'Cricket'

The ACME No. 470 Clicker, or 'Cricket' as it became known, was conceived in the 1920s as a time-keeping device for musicians, but was adopted in 1944 by US paratroopers who needed a way of discreetly identifying friendly forces after landing behind enemy lines at night. 7,000 were supplied ahead of the D-Day invasion, very few of which now survive and are expensive antiques. Our authentic replica is made in the UK by the same company, on the actual tooling and machines used in 1944. It is superb quality and almost indistinguishable from the originals. Nowadays, they also serve as a useful dog training aid. Supplied wartime-style cardboard box with certificate of authenticity.

1944 ACME No.470 Clicker.

Ornamental Yacht Sculptures

Boldly sculptured in solid brass or polished aluminium, these counter-sterned, sloop-rigged yachts make stunning ornaments. The subtle curves of their sails pick up light and reflections from surrounding objects to make constantly changing patterns.

7287 Brass Yacht, 14x23cm.
7286 Brass Yacht, 10x15cm.

7287

7286

Recycled Aluminium

5290 5293

5290 Aluminium Yacht Sculpture, 20cm.
5293 Aluminium Yacht Sculpture, 30cm.

Storm Lighter

Originally made by soldiers in the trenches in World War I from spent bullet cases, seafarers adopted this practical brass petrol lighter. The sliding stormguard shields the flame, even in a strong wind. When lowered it operates a snuffer extinguishing the flame and protecting the wick from spray. With positive flint control. 8cm long.

4600 Storm Lighter.

